

Prof. Dr. Fritz Sager

Professor of Political Science at the KPM Center for Public Management
University of Bern

Abstract

The keynote addresses conditions for evidence-based public health policy and practice. Research on knowledge utilization often focuses on the demand side of the knowledge takers but tends to neglect the supply side. Following Patton's concept of 'utilization-focused evaluation', the keynote argues to take the knowledge providers into responsibility and offers suggestions how to do so.