

Daniel Frey

Board Member

The Swiss Society for Public Health

Daniel Frey is a paediatrician with long-standing expertise in child and adolescent health. From 1988 until his retirement in 2013, he served as Director of the School Health Services of the City of Zurich. He has contributed to the development of several municipal and national public health strategies, including Zurich's overarching health promotion and prevention framework. His focus areas have included mental health in schools, teacher wellbeing, suicide prevention, and early detection of psychological difficulties in children and adolescents.

Daniel Frey is a former president of the Swiss Association of School Physicians and UNICEF Switzerland. He currently serves on the board of the Swiss Society for Public Health, where he leads the specialist group on child and adolescent health, with a current focus on mental health promotion in young people.
