

Chiara Servili

Technical Officer, Child and Youth Mental Health Programme, World Health Organization (WHO)

Chiara Servili is a child neuropsychiatrist with over 15 years of experience in global child and adolescent mental health. She works at the World Health Organization's Department of Mental Health, Brain Health and Substance Use, where she serves as the technical focal point for child and young people's mental health.

Her work focuses on the development of normative guidance and implementation tools to support brain and mental health from early childhood through adolescence. She also provides technical support to countries and WHO regions, particularly in Africa and the Eastern Mediterranean.

Dr Servili is WHO's technical lead for the Joint WHO–UNICEF Programme on Mental Health and Psychosocial Well-being and Development of Children and Adolescents, currently active in 13 countries. She holds an MPH from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and a PhD from the University of Modena.
