

Matteo Rizzoli

Professor, LUMSA University

Matteo Rizzoli is a Professor of Economic Policy at LUMSA University. He teaches Economic Policy, Behavioral Economics, and Experimental Economics at the master's level and supervises students in the PhD program in Civil Economy. Additionally, at the Pontifical Institute Giovanni Paolo II for Studies on Marriage and Family, he serves as a lecturer in the Political Economy of the Family Institution.

He is a member of the Scientific Council of the Economy of Francesco and the Scientific Committee of CISF (International Center for Family Studies). His research interests include law and economics, behavioral public policy and regulation, experimental economics, family economics, and family policy.

Matteo Rizzoli is married to Lucia Marchegiani, and together they care for their six children (Adriano, Margherita, Romeo, Ginevra, Leonardo, and Chiara).