

Prof. Andrea Madarasová Gecková, PhD

Prof. Andrea Madarasová Gecková, PhD. (1972) serves as a professor in social psychology and expert in research on social determinants of health, and research capacity building. Since 2002 she has been responsible for the PhD research projects done within international collaboration of universities in Slovakia, the Netherlands and later on also Czech republic. Most of the studies carried out in her research team are cross-sectional population based studies, but also longitudinal and ecological studies were carried out as well. Recently she focused also on innovative methods stimulating participation of various stakeholders. More than 10 years she serves as member of editorial board of International Journal of Public Health responsible for Central and Eastern European region.